WAR IN THE GULF

The staff here at Lambda was dismayed by the breakdown of diplomacy that lead to the state of war that now exists in the middle east. It is our sincere hope that our troops now serving in that area will soon return home safely to their families. The thoughts on the war are probably as diverse on this campus as they are in this office. All the Lambda staff members would like to see an end to this war but we do not all agree on whether or not Canadian troops should be involved. I am sure that there are a number of people here at Laurentian University who have strong feelings regarding this war. I would extend an invitation to all students to use this forum to let your feelings be known.

Most other student papers in Canada have adopted a strictly anti-war viewpoint in their treatment of war issues. Lambda is not going to do that. We are going to remain receptive to the wide variety of viewpoints that exist on this campus. I would hope that many Laurentian students would take advantage of this forum that is always accessible to you and stand up and be counted for what you believe in.

Dear Fellow Survivor of Sexual Abuse:

I know what you're thinking, another piece of writing to read. I can't and won't blame you for thinking that. Initially, I thought: "Isn't it enough that I lived through this, do I have to read about it too?" The one thing that I ask of you, if that before you decide to throw this paper out, please take the time to read it when you feel emotionally ready to do so.

I too am a victim of having been sexually abused. I prefer to think that I am a survivor of sexual abuse as opposed to a victim. Believe me there have been many times that I felt that I was a VICTIM let alone being a survivor. But just think of it, as many authors have written, you have survived a lot. Before I tell you a little bit about myself, I think it is extremely important to tell you that your experiences are just as important, if not more, than mine. We seem to minimize our experiences to lessen the pain and more than likely we have grown up with the life script that says: "There is always someone worse off than you." While that may be true it does not negate the fact that we have been abused long term/short term, at the hands of one abuser or by many, the fact is that it did happen and that's what makes it important.

I was abused by three family members, my father and two older brothers. This abuse started at a very early age and continued for many years. I became very good at repressing these memories and minimizing my experiences for a very long time. As life does throw all of us some curve balls, circumstances and life situations arise that dredge up these memories. I have known for several years that I had been a victim of incest, but that is as far as I wanted to go with it. Copping out??? I don't think so, I sincerely believe that, at that point in my life I wasn't ready to deal with it in addition to having 'helping' professionals who felt very uncomfortable with this whole issue. I know what you must be thinking... THEY felt uncomfortable about sexual abuse, hah!!!, what about us who lived through it?! Not a cheery thought but there are some people in the helping profession who truly care and offer their ears, shoulders, a non judgmental attitude and acceptance of YOU to help you through it.

I have often thought that the process of 'healing', speaking out about my abuse, events, reading related literature was in itself another form of abuse. I often found myself getting very angry and upset that I had to live through this again, after all wasn't it me that was victimized initially? So why do I have to be the one that has to do all this? I had problems with nightmares, night terrors and the ever forboding flashbacks. There were times that I woke up in the morning wondering if what I had lived through that night was in fact real or was it just a flashback. Sometimes I found it difficult to do my 'reality' checks. I don't have these nightmares/flashbacks all the time now, in fact I can go long periods without having any of them.

How I wanted to believe "Gee I've finally come through to the other side. I've dealt with it all now and that's the end of it!" You may be thinking: "When does this become a letter of encouragement?" This is a letter of encouragement, but I don't want to lie to you nor do I want to hand you a line, God only knows, we've had our share of them. As you are probably finding out, dealing with sexual abuse is no easy feat. There is a hell of a lot of pain, anger and frustration involved. Sometimes we direct the anger where it belongs and sometimes, more often than not, it is misdirected (to out support people). My support people have told me numerous times that they could handle it. I didn't always believe it, but this is one area that you'll have to 'trust' them and take them at their word. For me it was a question that I couldn't handle it! I somehow felt that they (support people) would look at me differently and judge me. Through some soul searching, I have come to realize that my support people don't assess me or judge me by MY measuring standards. What a relief for that!!! I know all too well how hard and demanding we are of ourselves. This drive in itself is not bad but it becomes dysfunctional when you place unrealistic expectations on yourself and on others. After all we are only human and are by no means perfect. Oh how I tried so hard to be perfect but as you can guess I failed at that. Now I try to be the best me that I can be.

Surviving isn't always easy nor is it always hard. I have always had a very low self esteem and value. Even though times may be difficult, I am beginning to believe that "Heh I'm worth it, and I deserve it!!" I have had my share of 'down' times too. I have survived years of sexual and emotional abuse and two suicide attempts. I can appreciate how hard 'things' get and how hopeless you can feel. My thoughts to you are, please try and hold on and try your damndest to contact one of your support people. We know all too well what we perceive ourselves to be, so it only makes sense that you call someone who can do some reality checking with you and tell YOU WHO YOU REALLY ARE. I have been very fortunate that in the recent years, through a lot of situational and maturational crises, that I have had some fantastic support people around me. With their help, concern and verbal hugs, I now have a life that belongs to me and not a slave to 'my past'.

I guess I may have missed the point when I started writing this but I felt so compelled to write this down and share it with you. I cannot say that I know your situation or that I know exactly what and how much pain you are going through right now, but I can say that I can empathize with your pain and what you have gone through and probably going through right now. I guess my overall message that I wanted to convey is:

"DON'T GIVE UP ON YOURSELF ESPECIALLY WHEN YOU ARE GOING THROUGH A ROUGH TIME. HEALING IS POSSIBLE, REWARDING, CHALLENGING, AND EXCITING BUT IT CAN ALSO BE A SLOW, SCARY AND PAINSTAKING PROCESS, BUT THERE IS LIFE AFTER SEXUAL ABUSE -- YOUR LIFE!!!"

I wish you continued success in your process of healing.

The SAD Case of Canadian Democracy

The January 10th Globe and Mail article contained a very ironic report about the state of affairs of Canadian democracy. This report depicted the meeting of Ontario Premier Bob Rae and his Quebec counterpart, Robert Bourassa. It was their first encounter as premiers and they interrupted their Florida vacations to discuss the constitutional and economic crisis, or more precisely the future of Canada. One can not help but be appalled by the enormous irony of this event.

Firstly, the very fact that politicians, who should be only public servants, were at that point still on vacations in contrast to the overwhelming majority of Canadians. Perhaps this would be more acceptable in times of peace and prosperity. We all know that such is not the case.

Secondly, the Florida location of this meeting is insulting. No self-respecting Canadian can be proud of the fact that such a profound topic, as the future of Canada is decided south of our border. No one should be under the illusion that this is a casual meeting. It is similar to a first ministers conferences -- events which are a world away from democratic associations. When mealtime arrives and cameras turn off, the real bargaining takes place, and the deals are made.

Thirdly, Rae and Bourassa are attempting to solve Canadian problems by themselves without the prime minister or other premiers. This is the most unusual way to promote a unity, based on equality of provincial membership to the confederation.

To an average individual, this is simply an extension of what he already knows. The Canadian governments on the federal and provincial level are clearly more elitist than populist. No, the "will of the people," as Mulroney calls it, is not done. The rank and file remains in a place that is only minimally better in comparison to his position 45 years ago.

Taking all that into consideration, we should all demand that our politicians roll up their sleeves, get off their behinds, implement co-operation into their daily conduct, and work. He should demand that our leaders work on making Canada the land of milk and honey that it can be. What we should condemn is the ridiculous conduct of these two leaders. While all emergency lights are signaling red, they were basking in the sun and deciding the Canadian future on siestas in Florida. What sad mockery of Canada and its people!

Off Campus Students Being Ripped-off

This letter is addressed to all Laurentian off campus students in hopes that you will all come to realize that your rights as students of this university are being ignored.

I would like to make you all aware of just how badly we're being stepped on. Most importantly, we must look at the fact that we make up 74% of the student body. This, in all fairness should make us of prime interest to the school, for without us it wouldn't have a leg to stand on.

However, it is the remaining 26% living in residence that seem to benefit the most from being students at Laurentian. There is never a shortage of activities for our friends in residence: parties, dances, sports, banquets... what a great way to promote comradeship among students! But what about us? Each one of us pays $10 of our tuition fees to one of the colleges. What do we get out of it? Certainly none of the above, and as far as I'm concerned, it is $10 I've just kissed good-bye.

This year, for the first time, some of our fellow off campus students have decided to push for the rights we have coming to us. We deserve to have every bit as much fun as any student living in residence. This handful of students have been trying to put together an organization especially for us: the 74% minority of this institution. The group is LOCS -- Laurentian Off Campus Students -- and I recommend that you all give them your whole-hearted support. After all, they don't receive any funds from our tuition fees as do other student organizations. Still, they exist and are making a name for themselves. Think what we off campus students could do with that $10 we kiss good-bye every year. Together we can remind everyone that 74% is a majority and that we have rights!

LU Offers Studies, Northern College

Laurentian University in Sudbury and Northern College in Timmins have signed an agreement that will allow students to get full Laurentian credits for their first year of university studies taken at Northern, starting September 1991.

"This initiative will benefit students in the Timmins area by enabling them to start their university studies without having to leave their community," said Dr. Charles Belanger, Acting President of Laurentian University. "Laurentian is very pleased to take part in extending the advantages of a university education to other regions of northern Ontario."

Added Robert Gervais, President of Northern College: "Northern is particularly excited about this partnership because it helps to create Northern College as a centre for excellence in post-secondary education in the Timmins area."

The agreement provides for courses in both French and English to be taught on site at Northern College. All courses will be offered in the day-time. A minimum of three courses will be taught live, with the remainder available via teleconference or distance education.

Eligible students include those who have completed grade 13, as well as mature students who have been outside the formal education system for at least two years. Courses, which will be taught by faculty from the Timmins area, will be approved by corresponding academic departments at Laurentian University.

The program has been in development for over a year, will allow first year university students from the Timmins area to avoid the travel, room and board costs that they would face if studying on-campus at Laurentian or other universities. Completing their first year at Northern College will also give these students a better sense of the realities of university level study, and help them to prepare them for their on-campus experiences once they attend Laurentian.

Laurentian University and Northern College are currently exploring funding options for support services attached to the new program.

In Defence of UCF

As a Université Canadienne en France alumnus, I am distressed to see the negative attitudes towards UCF circulating around Laurentian University. Much of this bitterness is born out of confusion as to what UCF is, its function, what it stands for, and the economic responsibilities which it entails. Many Laurentian students are associating their financial burdens with Laurentian's involvement with the France project. Many of the grievances which students and faculty cite are unfounded and have evolved from a general ignorance of the complexity of the issue. For example, the anonymous individual who submitted a Letter to the Editor in LAMBDA's January 10, 1991 edition best illustrates the misconception which the Laurentian school body has over the Université Canadienne en France idea. UCF is a multi-faceted issue which requires care and prudence when arguing for and against it.

Many people, including my anonymous friend, have boiled UCF down to a purely monetary notion. Which is fine, yet, before pursuing an argument on economic grounds, all facts both must first be examined.

To start, Laurentian University does not own the Université Canadienne en France campus; that distinction belongs to Blyth & Company. Instead, our institution has the responsibility for UCF's academic program. Any money which Laurentian University has sent to UCF has gone to the establishment of an academic curriculum, and not towards any investment into French real estate.

Another cantankerous issue is the eligibility of UCF students for government student assistance programs. Every UCF student who qualifies for government assistance, may be awarded a grant or loan depending on whatever is applicable to their situation. However, one must not be misled by this seemingly unfair act. The students who attend the Université Canadienne en France come from all the universities and colleges from across Canada. These people have already decided which institution they will attain their degree at; UCF is but a slight detour in their plans. Normally, the government assistance which these people have been awarded would go to their home universities. However in this case, the money is instead channeled into Laurentian University coffers for Laurentian's use.

This then leads to an important and often overlooked factor. Regardless of whether the student decides to spend his/her entitlement at the Université Canadienne en France or at Laurentian University's Sudbury campus, all tuition gathered at both facilities goes directly to Laurentian's Sudbury campus. It is only later that UCF is given a portion of money with which to fulfill its monetary requirements. Yet there is still money left over from UCF tuitions which never goes to France., Rather, it stays here in Sudbury.

To consolidate this position consider these points: since the Université Canadienne en France campus can facilitate two hundred students, imagine an influx of two hundred additional automobiles in our already inadequate parking facilities; and influx of two hundred additional students competing for living quarters in both the Residences and abroad in Sudbury. Consider also an influx of two hundred additional people in all our facilities and using all our services and then consider that the vast majority of UCF students will never use, let alone see, anything at the Sudbury campus and yet, their tuition fees help support all these things.

Another bone of contention among Laurentian students is the wide belief that the Université Canadienne en France is a fiscal failure. Many feel that Laurentian University is wasting their hard-earned money on someone's vacation dreamland project. This view is utterly incorrect and there is statistical evidence which proves this.

Although Laurentian University is, at present, in the red financially because of its initial contribution to the UCF academic program, projections have been made that this debt will be paid off by the scholastic year 1996-97. This debt will be paid off solely from tuitions gathered from UCF students and not from the additional revenues gathered at the Sudbury campus. Laurentian University has not contributed any more new money to UCF.

Moreover, it has also been projected that Laurentian University stands to gain an additional $993,440.00 by the 1997-98 scholastic year alone from its UCF investment. The Université Canadienne en France has, from the time it began in 1987, never lost any money; it has only gained it.

If anyone wishes to verify this information, visit the Université Canadienne en France office on the seventh floor of the Library Tower and ask for the "Université Canadienne en France: Academic Review. October 1990" document. Upon receiving the document, review the articles "Schedule A", "Schedule B", and "Incremental Cash Flow Impact of Entering Into Another Five Year Contract at Villefranche" on pages 63, 64, and 67 respectively. This document, and in particular the aforementioned articles, best illustrates the financial position of UCF. It is this important information which my anonymous friend seems to have conveniently neglected in his/her assessment of UCF.

At this time I will direct your attention back to my anonymous friend's letter on UCF. For reasons already given, a financial argument against UCF would undisputably go in UCF's favour. Since this aspect of his/her assessment of the situation, incredible ignorant of the entire issue, and highly reproachable for his/her remarks.

Firstly, my anonymous friend completely perverted the statistics on the number of Laurentian University students who attended UCF. In the past three years since UCF first opened its doors, only fifteen Laurentian students have attended this facility. Observe please the wording of the previous statement, "only fifteen", and do not misconstrue it with "fifteen only". There is no limit as to how many Laurentian students can attend the Université Canadienne en France. If someone from Laurentian wants to go to UCF, then he/she is by all means eligible to do so.

Now, there are a few factors which prevent many Laurentian students from undertaking such an endeavor. A criterion which everyone wishing to go to UCF must pass is that he/she must be in good academic standing at his/her home university. Surprisingly, many people disqualify for UCF on this very basis; they failed a number of their courses. Next, many people simply "chicken-out" and either withdraw or never return their application. And finally, for financial reasons, some are unable to go.

With regards to the last point, this is not to say, however, that UCF is an exclusive country club for rich Laurentian students. ON the contrary, I can attest that I do not come from a family of may means yet I was able to go. I achieved my passage to France by toiling in a filthy, gaseous pit, somewhere in the INCO Smelter for my entire summer break. It was not uncommon for me to work a seventy hour week. Like many of my fellow UCFers, I earned the money to go to France from the sweat of my brow and the frugality of my saving. Anyone can go to the Université Canadienne en France. It require though, hard-work, careful penny-pinching, and a dedicated commitment to attaining this goal.

The other allegations which my anonymous friend has stated are utterly ludicrous and only goes illustrate the total ineptitude which he/she possesses in analyzing anything of this nature. My friend draws a relationship between the higher food prices found at the grocery store located in the Single Student's Residence and the supposed financing of UCF students. This grocery store, along with every other food vending facility on

SGA Considers Pulling out of OFS

By Chris Land

The Ontario Federation of Students cost the students of Laurentian University $3.00/SGA member but they spend more time lobbying for non-academic issues than academic. The money that is sent to OFS could be better spent here at Laurentian. These were some of the reasons given that favored holding a referendum on SGA's possible withdrawal from the OFS.

Dave Maguire, one of the proponents of the motion, stated that there was a problem with getting the OFS message out to average students. The OFS is the only lobby group for students in Ontario but they spend a lot of time covering non-academic issues. He feels that holding a referendum would perhaps push Laurentian students to become more active.

As well many of the members of council stated that there is too much apathy at Laurentian. Very often important issues are ignored here. Withdrawing from OFS would further damage our campus' credibility.

SGA president Marc Veno warned that this decision must not be made in haste. He asked councilors to wait before making a decision to allow SGA to gather information about OFS and bring it back to council. It was then decided by council to table this motion for two meetings to allow the members of council to become more informed before a vote is held.

the Sudbury campus is owned and operated by Merriott Foods Ltd., which, incidentally, is a catering service which won the exclusive rights to sell food stuffs on campus. Although Laurentian University awarded the contract to Merriott Foods Ltd., it has no control on the prices which Merriott is asking for its goods. All the profits made on food sales go to Merriott, not Laurentian. If it is felt that Merriott Foods Ltd. is fleecing the student body, it is a simple matter to file as many grievances as possible against the company and force Laurentian to find a more suitable alternative to Merriott.

My anonymous friend seems to believe that the cause for the increased parking fares and erection of the infamous toll gates is the fault of UCF. Unsurprisingly, this too is a mistake. Prior to last year, Laurentian Security guards could ticket any automobile which did not have the appropriate parking sticker. However, the City of Sudbury revoked this privilege since Security became too overzealous in giving out fines. This quashed all of Security's control over the campus parking and this in turn allowed people to park wherever they felt like it. In order to alleviate this problem, Laurentian introduced the toll gates, thus insuring that whatever parking privileges people were entitled to, they were guaranteed to get it. Probably the increased parking fares are to help pay for this measure of control.

My anonymous friend's accusations that Laurentian University lost its Canada Employment Centre because money was diverted to UCF instead of going towards the Centre is totally unfounded. The Canada Employment Centre was scuttled, not because of UCF, rather, by our beloved Federal government. Blame Mulroney for this tragic blow, not UCF.

And finally, the most ridiculous statement my anonymous friend expounded, the Université Canadienne en France is to blame for the failure of Laurentian University's Intramural Hockey league. Consider his argument: Laurentian University initiated covert plans to embezzle 6,400.00 from the student body via tricking them into paying a $400.00 per team entrance fee only to cancel the league and keep the cash before the league had time to start. The stupidity of this notion astounds me. There is absolutely no evidence whatsoever to back such a claim that the UCF program is even remotely involved in this fiasco. The party to blame is not UCF, rather, the individuals who engaged in the bench-clearing brawl during one of the games which ruined it for everyone. As for the money, the people who organized this ill-fated league are the one's to see.

I would certainly hope that I have answered most of the questions about the Université Canadienne en France. Those which I have not I will address in another article later. What has been shown here is that UCF is an issue which cannot be taken lightly. There are many aspects of the argument which require examination before a proper evaluation of UCF can occur. Too often people are using UCF as a scapegoat for problems which they cannot easily identify. It would be tragic for Laurentian University to loose the Université Canadienne en France because of a misunderstanding. Although not apparent, UCF has an intrinsic worth more valuable than we give it credit for.

Respectfully submitted,
Gary Bass

Native Studies Welcomes Roger Spielmann

Professor Roger Spielmann recently joined the Department of Native Studies at the University of Sudbury. He spent the last 11 years living and working with the Algonquin First nation in Western Quebec. From 1983-1990, he served as the Coordinator of the Algonquin Language and Culture Program at Amos Ososwan School in the community of Winneway. He was involved in a number of bilingual education and document translation projects in the communities of Pikogan and Winneway, and admits to occasional bouts of being homesick for community life. He also taught community-based courses under the auspices of McGill University and the University of Quebec.

Dr. Spielmann moved to Sudbury last August with his wife Ruth, and his three daughters, Jennifer (12), Melissa (9) and Stephanie (4). He graduated with a B.A. in Social Sciences from Warner Pacific College (Portland, Oregon) in 1976, and in 1977, he completed his M.A. in Sociology at the University of Texas. In 1984, he earned his doctorate from the Department of Anthropology and Sociology at the University of British Columbia. His major research interests are in the areas of Ojibwa language and culture, Algonquian discourse analysis, ethnography of speaking, Native education and ethnomethodology.

Dr. Spielmann is currently teaching three courses at the University of Sudbury: Contemporary Native Issues,

The Original People of North America, and Education and Native People. He enjoys teaching the Department of Native Studies and considers himself to be a student-oriented professor who likes to incorporate Native community issues into his courses. He is conversationally fluent in Algonquin (a northern dialect of Ojibwa) and French. He has published extensively in a number of academic journals, including Journal of Literary Semantics and Papers of the Algonquian Conference. He recently completed a book which is being used in the Secondary Language and Culture Program at Amos Ososwan School, entitled Melvin the Moose Presents a Survival Guide to Algonquin Language and Culture. When asked about his alter-ego, he said: "Melvin is no ordinary moose. In fact, if you see Melvin in the bush, I would advise you to stay clear of him. He can be one mean son-of-a-moose."

Dr. Spielmann's current research interests focus on developing a Hypercard computer-based version of the Survival Guide and doing research on Native humour with one of his colleagues. He also acts as an Anthropology Consultant for the Société internationale de linguistique and is actively involved in supporting the Chicago Cubs. His dream is to someday play centerfield for the Cubs: "if not in this life, then perhaps in the next."

Dr. Spielmann welcomes visitors to this office, especially those bearing gifts of donuts.

Social Sciences Merit Increments

Dr. Charlotte Neff, Acting Dean of Social Sciences, is pleased to announce that the following faculty members have received merit increments for 1989-1990: Dr. D. Buse, History; Dr. R. Dyck, Political Science; Prof. G. Gaudreau, History; Dr. J. P. Martin, Geography; Dr. R. Pitblado, Geography; Professor S. Saltstone, Law and Justice; Dr. G. Tesson, Sociology; Dr. T. "THE CAMPAIGN TOWARDS EXCELLENCE"

"The Campaign Towards Excellence" is the result of the combined efforts of Laurentian's Alumni Affairs, the School of Human Movement, and the School of Physical Education Student's Association (SPESA).

The goal of the campaign is to raise enough funds in the 90s to place the School of Human Movement at the cutting edge of Physical Activity Sciences by the turn of the century. Money raised will be used for the improvement of the labs at the B.A. Physical Education. The campaign is scheduled to last several years and will greatly improve the scholastic facilities at the school.

This year's first endeavor is a lottery with prizes valued in excess of $9 900. We have received tremendous support from our sponsors in the Sudbury region. Our sponsors and prizes include:

PRIZES/PRIX

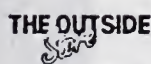

- All inclusive one week trip for two to Royal Maeva Resort, Huatulco, Mexico.

DR. JENO TIHANYI
PHYSICAL EDUCATION SERVICES/
SERVICES D'ÉDUCATION PHYSIQUE

The draw date will be held on MARCH 1, 1991 at 8:00pm in the Ken Bahnuk Lounge at the Phys. Ed. Centre. Tickets can be purchased from any of the Phys. Ed. Council members, faculty members, Alumni Affairs, and many Phys. Ed. students.

The campaign's most attractive aspect is the fact that it is being conducted by the students with help from the Alumni Affairs and the faculty of Human Movement. The Organizing Committee is comprised of three students: Doug Basso, Jodi Dolan, and Lynn Gallagher, two Alumni personnel: Mrs. Cindy Ives-Bigeau and Mr. Richard Vaillancourt. The Chair is Dr. Robin Michel and other contributors to the campaign include Dr. Al Salmoni, John McIlwain, and Dr. Sandy Knox. The effort of these people should not go unnoticed and they should be commended on their outstanding jobs. But their work is not finished yet, the campaign is just beginning.

As a service to the people of Laurentian University and of Sudbury, students and professors will be conducting Physical Fitness Tests. This will be done with the computerized ergometer that this year's campaign is geared towards. The tests will be conducted at various locations including shopping malls and arenas throughout the Sudbury area.

We hope we will be able to count you as a contributor to "The Campaign Towards Excellence," as it is such an important part of the School of Human Movement's success. Thank you for your support.

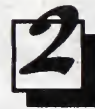

For more information, call Doug at 688-9378, Jodi at 688-9243, or Dr. Robin Michel at ext.1010.

TICK
TOCK . . . Snap out of it!!

Mike Mandel will take volunteers from the audience and hypnotize them. And at the delight of the audience, these people will sing, dance, and will perform ridiculous acts. It's all in fun and will be followed by the video dance, laser show.

So, prepare yourself for an alternative night of all around entertainment.

Location : GREAT HALL

Start Time : Thursday, January 31st
from 9 pm. - finished.

ANDREW LOWE

Andrew Lowe has been a main attraction at our PUB for quite some time now. He has been entertaining us with his flouirushing vocals and his musical talent for a long time now. No one can replace the way he sings Billy Joel or the old Irish pub songs. It's so amazing how he can draw a crowd no matter what night of the week it is. So don't be square, just be there!!

Location : PUB

Monday, January 28th from 2 - 5 pm.

Location : GREAT HALL

Start Time : Tuesday, January 29th from 9 pm. - 1 am.

MARK LABELLE

Get ready to participate in a night you will never forget!! The notorious Mark Labelle is back! He is a single keyboard playing comedian and entertainer. His main objective is his performances being fun filled! The multi-synthesizer and one drum machine show is here to help celebrate our Carny Week. You still can't picture this man's style? He spews out a non-stop barrage of one liners and wicked innuendos at his audience. The songs merely act as time to recharge his battery and feel out the crowd to get the next patron on stage to sing an Elvis number or to become one of the Four Tops. So be energized and come out to party with THE Mark Labelle!!!

Location : PUB

from 2 - 5 pm.

MIKE WOODS

WATCH OUT . . . for on January 30th, Mike Woods is entering our PUB with his six and twelve string guitars to blast away! This man has a song list longer than the Book of World Records! His tunes range from serious, funny, socially aware, political, and about touring and the people he meets. Mike Woods has supported acts for Frozen Ghost, Blue Rodeo, The Good Brothers and many more. Join in the memory and come and see the infamous Mike Woods!!

The Valley Boys

Okay, who's first? DOA Hecklers? Sure why not? Can't you brainless twits find something better to do than criticize us? We'd appreciate it also if you didn't use the Valley Boyz' name in the same context with yours. As for your feeble attempt at humour which you call your top ten list, we have a few elaborations to point out. First of all, you guys need glasses! What you thought were blow up dolls were actually real honest to goodness girls, and we weren't blowing THEM! Secondly, you must have failed miserably in HOME-EC if you use condoms instead of thimbles. Thirdly, you don't make up stories about your sexual exploits? WHAT EXPLOITS??? Fourthly, do you guys know how to use a dictionary or do you just use The Force? You can sure spell!! We think you'd best do something about your dyslexic condition soon. To show our concern we'll send you some fish. Furthermore, original whats? ASSHOLES? Like you were the first to come up with a club name! Get a life! Nextly, DOA Hecklers don't eat yellow snow! Now there's a completely intelligent statement. Does that you eat snow of every other colour? I think we've stumbled on why your average IQ is somewhere in between that of plankton and a toaster. Just out of curiosity, what are you guys registered in anyways? You are the only third year freshmen we know of. Finally, if you dinks had any idea who we are whatsoever, you would know that we don't cheer for the Habs-Beens either. Try again morons! But we have to hand it to you guys, you really are legends. Legends in your own minds!

This next segment of literary abuse is aimed at the mountain men, who, incidentally, write like a bunch of women (Pardon the expression) Joke'em if they can't take a f___! Our intent with our column was indeed to write useless trash that would nevertheless be read by everyone. Let's face it. Regardless of whether you like us or not, you still read what we have to say! You ditzy wenches are proof that we've achieved our goals. If we wanted your opinion we'd give it to you. Now tell us, if you have never seen us, how in the f___ can you formulate a FIRM opinion about us? We detect some female reasoning here folks. Are we? Yes, we're entering the Brain-fade Zone! Okay, but seriously, so you've never met us. Well, after the slanderous baloney you wrote about us, I don't think you want to. However, if you like, you can leave us a name and number via Lambda, and we'll get back at you whenever our busy schedule allows us. Until then, warm up and lose your virginity.

To all the people who read our article (even those that don't like us), thank you for your support. Futhermore we want to apologize to those we may have offended with the content of our material. Our prime goal is to entertain, not offend. However, in this day and age of Eddie Murphy and Andrew Dice Clay, it is sometimes hard to achieve one without the other. Please ladies, don't take all this bullshit seriously. If it weren't for women the Valley Boyz wouldn't be where they are today. You have all been wonderful to us (you know who you are) and we love you all, big or small, short or tall, and yes even the blondes.

Alrighty, next on the shit list is the Goddess of Love. We once were told that better than to say the right thing at the right time is to leave unsaid the wrong thing at the wrong time. If you don't get our drift, let us put it differently for you. You don't get something for nothing these days. Oh and for all those seeking immortality, here is something else to think about. Man knows not what to do with this life but yet seeks one that will last forever.

Anyways, time has run short and we really must get back to our (ahem), studies. We hope never to have to do this sort of thing again in the future. So go ahead, write stuff about us. We don't care! At least you'll be doing something right? The ability to ignore often outweighs the ability to defend oneself. In fact we won't ever do this again. Not because it is senseless and without cause and not because there is enough conflict in the world but because, we're the Valley Boyz.

The SPLASH is coming!!!!

Dear Jillian

Dear Readers:

I am writing Long Distance from a recovery spa in L.A. My face is not yet presentable, but I'll be back next week. Send your letters to Dear Jillian c/o Lambda. I'll be looking forward to hearing from you.

Dear Jillian:

A few nights ago, my boyfriend shocked me and ravished me very nicely, I must say! I totally, orgasmically enjoyed it and I wonder how I may get him to do it again? And again, and again.

ME

Dear ME:

It sounds like you must be doing something right. What's your problem??

Dear Jillian:

I'm a bit of a jelly fish-type babe, people piss me off sometimes and no matter what, I can't get mad and stay mad. I'm worried this will affect my relationship with my lover? Any suggestions?

Giggles

Dear Giggles:

Don't be such a wimp. If people piss you off, don't let them get away with it. If you do they will think they can get away with anything and will walk all over you. So don't be weak and a jelly fish-type or people will continue to treat you like a piece of shit. Wake-up, you must see the pattern.

Dear Jillian:

I was looking with interest at the advertisement for the Akbar and Jeff Wildman Weekend but the only problem is that there is no dates posted. Does this mean that this goes on every weekend or is it just an oversight.

A Wildman Lambda Staffer

Dear Wildman:

It's only a joke!! Get a life!!!

Dear Jillian:

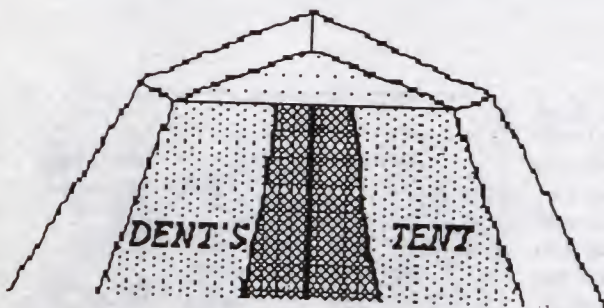

Before you went away to California, for your much needed facial reconstruction, a person (male?/female?) by the name of "The Best Yet Worst Thing That Could Happen To Her" expressed an interest in the Goddess. This person has not yet revealed her/himself to me. How do I get s/he to do so?

An Unfortunately very single Aphrodite

Dear Unfortunately:

Well, how about I suggest a request of flowers to be sent to "The Goddess of Love" c/o Lambda, with a revealing little note about who wants to know!!

A Long Distance Jillian

Following That Bouncing Ball

by Denton Anthony

It really wasn't that long ago when this writer wrote an article titled "Men's Basketball? Really! ", (LAMBDA, Thursday, November 29, 1990). Well, now it's time to really believe. When I wrote the statement, "They are a team with those intangibles which will make them more than competitive." I truly meant it, and the Voyageurs are making me look good. It was there turn to host the party last weekend. All the Voyageurs had to say to Queen's and York was, don't bring Kool-Aid to my party. The two home victories last weekend improved the Voyageurs record to a perfect 6-0. More importantly, they remain atop of their division. Even though it is early in the season, the way the Voyageurs are playing and the blue collar workman-like efforts could lead to speculation of a top 10 ranking in the near future. With a couple of top 10 teams losing last weekend anything is possible. However, it has often been that the Voyageurs efforts have gone unnoticed. This was the case last year, when the Voyageurs were playing extremely well for a number of weeks and convincingly beat the later to be crowned National Champions Concordia Stingers. Never the less, if the boys in blue and gold continue winning, especially if they beat Ryerson and U of T this weekend, it will be hard to deny them a top 10 ranking.

Laurentian University Athlete of the Week

Name : Mike Richter

Laurentian University Athlete of the week honours go out to Mike Richter of the Men's Curling Team.

Mike's outstanding play lead the Laurentian Men's Curling team to a first place finish in the Eastern Sectional this past weekend. The Laurentian team defeated McMaster University, Queen's University, University of Toronto, and R.M.C.

Congratulations to Mike Richter of the Men's Curling Team. (Way to go Kincardine!)

The Basketball Beat: Back With Lack

by Jay Lack

Yet another perfect weekend has passed for our basketball teams. With both the Lady Vees and Voyageurs winning two each, the teams remain alone atop their respective divisions.

On Friday, the opposition (?) was Queen's. After the Lady Vees trampled their victim's by about fifty, the Voyageurs started slowly, leading by only three at the half. But in the second half, an outstanding defensive effort granted Queen's only 31 points, while Norm Hann continued to score at a frantic pace. As well, co-captain John Campbell, pulled groin and all, flip-flopped between point guard and small forward and earned Molson M.V.P. honours in the process. The final was 100-84.

York visited on Saturday, marking the return of FORK YORK night. The noise-makers were out in full force (special thanks to Mario and the gang) for the gala events, as well as the television crews. On this night, rookie surfer Chris Fischer, out of Wasaga Beach, would not be denied. Using a plethora of "b.s. fakes", fish was the catalyst in a 84-75 Voyageur victory. And for his 17 point, 8 rebound performance, he received one of those Molson sweatshirts. But go up to him and pull on his ears - he'll be just as thrilled!! The Lady Vees capped the perfect with a great game against their buddies from York. It was actually close for a little while (WOW!), but the terrific pressure defense of Laurentian began to take over in the second half, and that was all she wrote! The final was 79-52, with Dianne Norman leading the way with 22 points. She grabbed Molson M.V.P. honours for both games, scoring 25 on Friday night.

This weekend, it's off to the Big Smoke for a double-dip against Ryerson on Friday, followed by the Showdown for first on Saturday. The Voyageurs take on arch-rivals U of T Blues at 2:00 pm. The game is being televised on CHCH in Hamilton and area, so tune in or better yet get a car pool together and come down to Toronto for some great hoops action!!!

Fire Count Floyd, Please!

By Trevor German

I am appalled that the Toronto Maple Leafs have permitted such an incompetent General Manager as Floyd Smith to continue ruining this once fine club.

Let's face the facts Floyd. You, in your relatively short tenure as Leaf General Manager, have managed to dissect a team with a once hearty future, and have turned it into a "let's just make the playoffs" team.

Let's examine some of your deals. Firstly, and foremost, the Tom Kurvers for your 1991 first round NHL draft pick. I ask you Floyd, where, I repeat, where were your brains when you were consummating this deal??? I agree, that season the Leafs played .500 hockey for the first time in ages, but was this because of the Tom Kurvers deal? Likely not. Gord Stellick had more of a hand in that season than you did. After all, Gord did pick up Rob Ramage for a steal, Brad Marsh on waivers, and signed Dave Reid. Granted, Gord did make a gross error in the Russ Courtnall for John Kordic deal, but many Leaf fans, myself included, believe that this deal was not all of Gord Stellick's mistake. Some of us believe that John Brophy and the late Harold Ballard had more to do with the Courtnall-Kordic deal than Stellick did.

The aforementioned 1991 first round draft pick could well have been the Eric Lindros pick. Lindros, a junior star who has been touted as the next Mark Messier, is slated to go first overall. You Floyd Smith, threw away any chance of picking up Lindros when you made this deal for a defenceman that wasn't worth half that much. Other General Managers around the league were stating to the press that if they had known that Count Floyd was offering his 1991 first round draft pick, they would have offered more than a Tom Kurvers.

After the memorable 1989-90 season, you, Floyd Smith, refused to make any deals in the off-season. Believing that your troops could carry over from their previous season and play above .500 in 1990-91. Boy, were you wrong. Let's imagine what would happen to the Maple Leafs in the '90-91 season if you did not make any deals in 1990. With the Quebec Nordiques playing much better, the Minnesota North Stars playing well enough to stay ahead of the Leafs, and the Islanders trying their best to finish last; none could beat the Leafs to the basement. Thus, the Maple Leafs would have finished last, that Kurvers-draft pick deal would change into the Kurvers-Lindros deal, and you would have been made the laughing stock of the hockey world. You would have been associated with single-handedly making the worst trade in hockey history. But no, you Floyd Smith could not live with that.

Recognizing that finishing last was a distinct probability, you panicked and fired Doug Carpenter. You began a flurry of trading to do everything in your power to avoid finishing last and becoming associated with the worst trade in history. You started trading away the future of the Toronto Maple Leafs in exchange for immediate dividends.

John McIntyre for Mike Krushelnyski was one of the panic trades you made. You gave away approximately 10 years in age and a little bit of future for a player that is finishing up his career. Considering the way McIntyre has played versus the way Krushelnyski has played, this deal didn't turn out half bad, but one must wait a few years before a final decision on this trade can be made.

Ed Olczyk and Mark Osbourne for Dave Ellett and Paul Fenton. It was well documented that the Leafs needed a quality centreman and they were already employing something like nine NHL calibre defencemen. Most Leaf fans were expecting a deal for a centre, but boy did you surprise us. You made a good deal in obtaining Ellett and Fenton, but you gave up the Leafs only quality centreman. Can somebody explain the reasoning behind this deal Floyd? Granted Eddie O was a whiner, Osbourne was doing nothing for the team, and you did get the better of the deal, but the last thing the Leafs needed was another defenceman.

Scott Pearson and two second round draft picks for Michel Petit, Aaron Broten, and Lucien Deblois. I'll give it to you Floyd, you are consistent. At this rate, the Leafs will have eighteen defencemen, three goalies and no forwards. Michel Petit has been one of the better (if not the best) defenders for the Leafs lately, and Deblois has played consistent, competent hockey. But Floyd, you did give away another 10 years in age and a truckload in potential to acquire yet another defenceman and another defensive forward.

This next deal is sort of humorous. Tom Kurvers for Brian Bradley. Just what the doctor ordered. Another third string centre. Brian Bradley has never had a season in which he has scored more than twenty goals. What this deal means is that you downgraded from the Kurvers-Lindros deal to the Bradley-Lindros deal. Good job Floyd. You just keep sinking and sinking don't you. Here's a suggestion, Brian Bradley for Doug Wickenheiser, and that way, you can get the biggest flop known to the NHL in exchange for Eric Lindros. Then you will have secured you title as the most incapable, ineffectual, inept, unfit General Manager in the history of sports and not just hockey.

This latest deal Floyd, was an illustration of your complete incompetence at running an NHL team. Al Iafate for Bob Rouse and Peter Zezel. You, in your ultimate wisdom trade a possible future Norris Trophy winner for two players that Washington didn't even need? You trade Al Iafate, who participated in last year's all-star game for two players that have never played in the mid-season classic. What's worse is that Peter Zezel has twice had career years of 72 points. These career years came in 1986-87 on a fairly strong Flyer team and in 1989-90 playing alongside the Golden Brett in St. Louis. Peter Zezel might match or surpass these career highs but chances are, under coach Tom Watt's defensive scheme, his point totals will flounder. Neither Peter Zezel nor Bob Rouse has ever played a full season of 80 games (although Rouse is on pace for an 81 game season this year). Both Zezel and Rouse average playing 62 games per season after 7 seasons, and Zezel is on pace for a 54 game season this year. Al

Iafate, however, has averaged 72 games per season and had a career year of 63 points in 1989-90, just 9 points back of Zezel's career years. It's easy to see that Iafate demanded a bigger price than what you got Floyd. Your lack of hockey intelligence amazes me, and the fact that the Toronto Maple Leafs allow your bungling to continue is fascinating.

Something has got to be done. The fans should not have to take this abuse season after season. We, the fans, should boycott all Leafs telecasts and games in an effort to show to the Leaf brass that we will not stand for this, and that Count Floyd should be fired as General Manager and someone more competent given the job. After all, even T.C. Puck (Harold Ballard's famed dog) knows more about hockey than Floyd Smith. I propose that the Leafs get on their knees and beg Gord Stellick to retake the position that is rightfully his...as General Manager of the Leafs. After all, Gord Stellick did trade Ken Wregget for two first round draft picks to the Philadelphia Flyers, obtained present captain Rob Ramage from the Calgary Flames for a paltry second round draft pick, and picked up Brad Marsh for virtually nothing.

This team was once a team with a future, and now it's a team that will make a final run for fourth place in the Norris Division, and bow out in the first round of the playoffs. Is this your aspiration Floyd? Is this your final objective? For the past five years or so, every Leaf General Manager refused to trade away the future. Each re-iterating that we, the fans, must be patient and that this team will come through. All of these GMs were fired, and when the Leafs finally showed a glimpse of the future last year, those previous GMs looked like prophets. Our patience has finally paid off we said. The Leafs ran into some problems in the 1990 season and Floyd Smith did exactly what many more intelligent men before him refused to do. He could not hold back his temptation for immediate salvation and ruined a team with a future that was just as bright as any other team's in the NHL. Thanks Floyd Smith.

OFF CAMPUS STUDENTS

Interested in playing intramural sports or participating in Carny Week but Don't have a team. Contact Mark Emond (688-1920 or 688-0919), Laurentians Off Campus Convenor for Intramurals. Some great upcoming intramurals include Mens and Womens 3 on 3 Basketball, Mixed Cross Country Skiing, Ball Hockey and the Splashy Belly Flop Competition. If you are interested in being on an Off Campus team for Carny Week contact Mark immediately. On Campus students who don't have a team are also welcome to participate on all Off Campus teams.

Nordic Ski Team Doing Well!!!

Several Laurentian Skiers travelled to Hardwood Hills, Barrie this weekend to compete in the Fleishman's Tour of Hardwood. Gareth Jones, of the Laurentian Nordic Ski Team finished second in the Men's 30 km Free Technique. Gareth finished ahead of Canadian national team. Gareth has been skiing extremely well this season and is currently 17th on the Canadian Nordic Skiing points list. This is very impressive as Gareth did not attend the Canadian Senior Championships. Another Laurentian athlete, Kim Chetwynd, won the Women's junior 5 km Free Technique Race.

Laurentian Nordic Ski Team also has five athletes who will be competing in the Canada Winter Games in Charlottetown, PEI. Gareth Jones, Eric Labrosse, Rob Barrett, Wendy Davis and Shannon Dunn (alternate) will compete for TEAM ONTARIO. Few schools can boost such a contribution to any team.

Handful of Lady Vees Suffer First Defeat

It wasn't pretty but a SCRAPPY bunch of Vees hockey players handled this powerhouse team. Even with a bias ref, flagrant fouls and many attempts to put the Hockey Vees off-balance, they overcame and won 21-20 in overtime. Led by a balanced attack of perimeter shooting the Lady Vees started on an 11 to 1 romp. The hockey Vees then called a quick timeout and implemented the feared 1-2-2 system of attack and slowly began to take over the game. As the onslaught finished, I could hear one of the Lady Vees say "Are these guys for real?"

British Universities Summer Schools 1991

Programme

This programme forms part of the official academic offering of the Universities of Birmingham, London and Oxford and provides courses related to the unique academic and cultural resources of each University. The programme has run annually since 1948. All the Schools have an established tradition of attracting distinguished lecturers and other leading authorities from British universities and elsewhere.

The academic programme seeks to provide a balance between supervised study and opportunities for students to pursue their particular intellectual interests. The details of the teaching programme vary from School to School. There are usually set lectures each working morning which all members of the School are expected to attend. In addition, each student attends a seminar or tutorial group which meets twice weekly for at least one hour and for which the student is expected to do specific reading and, on occasion, to submit an essay or to present a paper introducing a class discussion.

Afternoons not taken up with formal study are free for students to read in the libraries, take part in optional open discussions or workshops, or go on visits, some of which are organized, relevant to the work of the course or of more general cultural interest.

Study on the six-week courses at Oxford and Stratford will be cumulative, but each three-week term will also be complete in itself; candidates may therefore apply to attend one term only. The BUSS programme has been arranged to give participants the opportunity to select two terms at separate Schools, eg London/Oxford, Stratford/Oxford, Oxford/Stratford.

Admission qualifications

The Schools are designed for graduates, particularly teachers, and for undergraduates who will have completed the penultimate year of their degree course by June 1991. All applicants should have an academic background which is sufficient to enable them to work at graduate level.

Credits and Certificates

All students who complete the School to the satisfaction of their tutors are awarded a Certificate of Completion (which is the equivalent of a Transcript in the USA). Six weeks' study on the Schools is generally evaluated for credit purposes in the USA as being worth six undergraduate credits or the equivalent number of graduate credits.

Fees

Birmingham: Resident students (bed and breakfast accommodation, tuition and Royal Shakespeare Company theatre tickets): whole course - £1,708; single term - £896. Non-resident students: whole course - £1,178; single term - £603.
London: Resident students, including tuition, half-board and some excursions: £940 (1 - 19 July); £1,200 (1 - 26 July). Non-resident students: £530 (1 - 19 July); £640 (1 - 26 July).
Oxford: Resident students, including tuition and full board: whole course - £1,750; single term - £950. Non-resident students: whole course - £850; single term - £505.

Scholarships

A limited number of scholarships is offered to cover part of the cost of tuition, board and lodging.

Closing dates

USA: 15 March All other countries: 31 March
